Farmers Stronger for Prohibition Than Ever Before, Louis J. Taber Reports

PAUL SMITHS, N. Y., Aug. 24 (AP) -A report on the industrial situation of the United States was made informally to President Coolidge by William Green, president of the President American Federation of Labor, and members of his executive council, at White Pine Camp, coming here from Plattsburg where they have been for several days prior to going to Montreal for a council meeting.

With them at luncheon also was

Louis J. Taber, master of the Na-tional Grange, who was a guest of the President, and who reported on conditions in the farm sections while the labor men spoke of the situation in the manufacturing cen-

Crowd at Hearing Learns That Taxicabs Are to Get Special Liability Consideration

Secretaries of 14 branches of the American Automobile Association throughout Massachusetts, following the hearing at the State Horse this morning on the new compulsory automobile insurance law, met to consider action requiring Wesley E. Monk, state insurance commissioner, to announce his schedule of proposed rates so that they may be compared with the varying rates in other state; before final decision is made.

Officials of the American Automo hile Association explained that in their opinion the public cannot adequately express its attitude, as was the desire at the hearing this morning, unless the rate proposals are available for consideration.

They emphasized, coincident with the plea of Frank A. Goodwin, Registrar of Motor Vehicles at the hearing that, there be no geographical differences in the rates throughout the state, and that rates already found feasible in other states should be taken into the equation in determining the Massachusetts schedule. It was indicated that hev would seek authority to require the Commissioner to announce the tentative rates

In his opening statement Mr. Monk explained that this law will cover only personal injury through the fault of automobile drivers, where accidents occur upon the highways of the State; that it does not cover property damage nor accidents of any nature upon private property or private ways. His task, he said, is largely confined to the establishment of the new policies and rates, in that they must be fair, just and nondiscriminatory for the owner and the insurer, while providing full protection for the public.

When the department approached this problem, he said, it was with the knowledge that Massachusetts was ploneering, that it was the first state to adopt such a law. It was also generally accepted, he found, that not more than 30 per cent of the State's auto owners have been carrying insurance against liability. The only figures available were those of the insurance companies. It was fair to assume that these were of some value, but their value was not certain. No figures could be produced to show what might be the value or effect of this law.

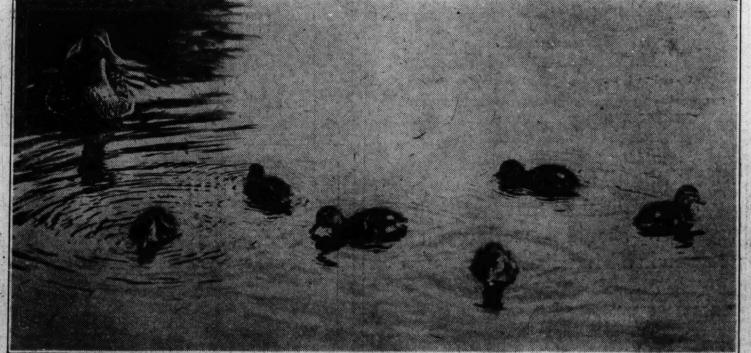

Called on Companies for Data The commissioner called on the ompanies for all such data to be had. It was evident that he could not deal individually with each of the 60 companies doing business in the State, so he suggested that a bureau be established and all the

PUBLISHER SETS NEW WAGE BASIS

Pressmen's Convention Told Production Should Be Gauge of Man's Worth

PRESSMEN'S HOME, Tenn., Aug. 24 (A)-Wages should be based upon individual production, so that the more efficient workman may receive a just return for his labor, Fred A. Walker, chairman of the Publishers' Association of New York City, told the annual convention of the Press-

Mr. Walker, a member of the exec utive board of the New York Sun and New York Telegram, and said to be the first newspaper publisher to address a union having contractual relations with him, remarked it is a peculiar thing that in the negotiations with the 18 unions having agreements with New York publishrs, production does not occupy more than one-tenth of one per cent of the time devoted to the consideration of paid."

Mr. Walker also deplored efforts to shorten the eight-hour day. This, was merely "an indirect way of increasing wages without giving any compensating concession to employer, as, he said, it is not sed that the men work any less ours, but that for a certain portion of these hours they be paid an over-

He expressed himself in favor of arbitration of disputes arising between a union shop and the em-ployer, claiming arbitration to be "the soundest principle ever designed to apply to human relations, unless we except the commandment 'Love thy neighbor as thyself.'"

Touching upon the interest the em-loyee should take in his employers'

Expressing a belief that a rigid bers here returned for nominatour-year apprenticeship for a pressman was too drastic, he suggested to the convention that the rule be changed to permit a young man after three years, who has all the necessary qualifications, to become a fully qualified pressman. This, he said, was the rule followed in practically all professions.

Action Filed in Ohio to Bar Its Business There

COLUMBUS, O., Aug. 24 (AP)-Characterizing his action as an attempt to "take control of the company away from Wall Street," G. Walter Booth, prosecuting attorney of Summit County, has filed suit in the state Supreme Court seeking to prevent the Goodyear Tire & Rubber Company of Akron from doing business in Ohio, and to oust eight members of the company's board of di-

The ouster proceedings, which Mr Booth said he instituted "on complaint and at the request of a stockholder," were based on the allega-tion that the state law had been violated in placing management of the corporation in the hands of "three certain joint tenants" who hold 10,000 shares of "management stock"

The ouster petitions failed to name the stockholder at whose request the suits were filed, nor did they reveal the names of the "joint tenants." Senator Moses and R. P. Bass in Keen Contest for Party Nomination

CONCORD, N. H., Aug. 24 (Special)

The senatorial campaign in New (ampshire which culminates Sept. 7 Hampshire which culminates Sept. 7 in the direct primary election now lies between George H. Moses, the present Republican Senator, and Robert P. Bass, formerly Governor of the State, in the opinion of observers. These two are contesting for the Republican nomination. The third candidate for the Republican nomination is James W. Remick, former justice of the Supreme Court. Judge Remick is not making a speaking tour of the State, as the others are doing.

The candidates for the Democratic nomination are Albert W. Noone, former member of the Governor's Council, and Robert C. Murchie, New Hampshire's member of the National Democratic Committee. Neither candidate is doing any active campaigning. The normal Republican majority in the State is 30,000.

The campaign between Senator

The campaign between Senator Moses and Mr. Bass is closing with a high degree of activity. Senator Moses is putting out a booklet in which a majority of the present members of the United States. Senate with a majority of the present members of the United States. Senate write endorsements of his ability activity and character. He is also appealing for rc-election on the ground that his election as president pro tempore of the Senate and his important committee assignments have brought prestige to New Hamp-shire which would be lost if a new senator should be sent.

Mr. Bass's campaign is based entirely on the argument that Senator Moses has not supported President Coolidge and has therefore not rep-resented the Republicans of New Hampshire. Mr. Bass was Governor 16 years ago and has the support in this campaign of John G. Winant, the present Governor.

At first glance this vehicle looks exactly like a scow with the broad nose and overhanging tail. The works are all in front of the driver and the tail is simply put on for balance. This means more than would appear at first, as it is believed by many the tendency in future American cars will be to locate the mechanism and fuel in just this way, leaving the rear end simply to complete the design. It also means shortening the wheel base and making the seating arrangement more compact than at present. Contrary to supposition, the effect of the new cars is a very long speedy line which makes the car look longer than it is.

Two years ago he bought a 2000-acre tract of land on the right of way of his Detroit, Toledo & Ironton Railroad near here. The land was divided into farms and let out to tenants. By CRAWFURD PRICE

By Cable from Monitor Bureau LONDON, Aug. 24-The news of yet another coup d'état in Greece will have come as no surprise to the readers of The Christian Science Monitor. In a series of articles from Athens I recently sought to point out the limited, if forceful, nature of President Pangalos' hold on the country, the strength and extent of the latent opposition and the apathy of the population toward his success I suggested also that unless the dictator speedily made terms with the political leaders and restored a constitutional government the end of his régime was merely a estion of time and opportunity.

Since then General Condylis has been hounded, hunted, exiled, imprisoned.

He has seen how easy it is to establish a dictatorship and how difficult lish a dictatorship and how difficult asmuch as the rate from interior points of ostensibly to change a régime, not to perpetuate it, and he knows—as all must know now in Greece—that a government to endure must rest on some solid measure of popular support. As for the usual manifesto it may be argued that it makes the usual promises, but in this case the assumed participation of politicians provides a certain guarantee and it has to be remembered that while General Condylis is not without ambition he has generally shown a tendency to manifest it along constitutional lines. So much is indicated by his two years' leadership of the National Republican Party.

TEXTILE FABRIC

A STATE OF S

That May Make It Competitor of Flax

BIRMINGHAM (Special Correspondence) -An important problem that is constantly before the textile world has recently been thrown into public prominence through the research work of Dr. Dinshaw Nanji of Birmingham University, and Dr. REFUGEES IN SYRA Payton of Bristol University, formerly of Birmingham. Dr. Dinshaw Nanji believes that he has solved the hitherto unresolved problem of turning tropical grasses and other fibrous material into textiles, by a chemical process which would make the production compete easily with cotton, both from an economic and textile point of view Competition of Flax and Pulp Experts have devoted themselves research on the matter, both in England, on the Continent, and in Midgley of Worcester, owner of a 50-America, for a great number of years, acre farm in this city. America, for a great number of years, and if Dr. Nanji proves sound in his hopes and belief, the new discovery will also possibly affect the wood pulp production of artificial silk, as well as the flax industry.

Flax, which up till the present time has been the most important of vegetable fibers, involves a great deal of labor and expense in the separating of the fiber from the fleshy contents of the plant. It has to be done by steeping the flax in water and allowing it partially to rot, when the linen thread may be drawn out. The tropical ramie grass is a wonderful fiber. strenger and better than flax, but un to the present time no commercial process has been able to treat it successfully, owing to the immense difficulty of separating the thread from the useless part of the leaf. Esparto grass, and many others, present similar difficulties, although growing in immense quantities in tropical and subtropical districts: Flint Motor Company has reduced prices on various models from $25 to $300. New list prices range from $960 to $2125, compared with former list of $1085 to $2395. The problem which faced Dr. Nanji and other chemical experts, was to discover and introduce some special form of ferment which would cause the grass to break up more rapidly INSURANCE and completely than the natural processes of flax:

. Special Ferments This use of special ferments, that is, low forms of growths which flourish in particular surroundings has been studied very exhaustively as it would enable cellulose to be prepared in more or less pure form from the crude cellulose of grassy material. All these grass and woody fibers consist of cellulose and water with other compounds in small quantities. It is the latter that makes the difficulty in preparing the fiber.

While it would be a little precipitate to imagine that all disculty this regard is now at an end, and time alone can show whether Dr. Nanji's hopes are fully justified, the

MRS. MALLORY IS AGAIN CHAMPION

Defeats Miss Elizabeth M. Ryan for Tennis Title in Remarkable Match

Special from Monitor Bureau NEW YORK, Aug. 24—Mrs. Frank-lin I. Mallory of New York, won the thirty-finth annual women's tenfils championship of the United States, on the West Side Tennis Club courts at Forest Hills. She defeated Miss Eliza both M. in a row at the start of the deciding set. She had broken through twice in succession on the best service that Mrs. Mallory could display. Then to clinch the matter, the California player sent over a perfect service ace for the first point of the fifth game. But that ace had an effect that Miss Ryan never intended. It roused every bit of determination that Mrs. Mallory possessed. The result was that the next four games were won by Mrs. Mallory, with nine of the 16 points that were required to win them scored on the finest series of drives for placements that Mrs. Mallory has shown since she overwhelmed Mile. Suzanne Lenglen in the same enclosure. Again Miss Ryan climbed ahead. She had the upper hand on service, having served first in every set, and this placed her within a point of victory in the fourteenth game, at advantage of the content of the fourteenth game, at advantage of the server of the English shore, exceeding the server of the s vantage. Once more, however, Mrs.

Mallory was equal to the occasior.
She poised herself, and one of her best services went on its way. It never came back to her. Miss Ryan got her racket on it, but the best she could do was to send it into the net.

Then Mrs. Mallory settled down to work once more and never again did the former partner of Mile. Lenglen have a chance to win. That pullup had settled the championship match by points:

a merry one in the race for the National League leadership. Monday, the first day, found the lead changing hands, and Cincinnati, within 3½ games of the top, is very much to be reckoned with.

Carey, former Pittsburgh cantain received tremendous ovations for his every move while playing in his first game for Brooklyn against the champions in the Smoky City yesterday.

Ogden, Baltimore pitcher, has a record of 20 games won and 13 lost in the International League, in all, 33 games in which he took part. Thormahlen of Reading has the most impressive record with 17 wins and five defeats.

Another illustration of the Yankees' numerous resources for winning games was evident yesterday when the fielding was none too good and the batting resulted in five hits only, but the pitching of Shocker was superb and won the game.

Pittsburgh is hard pressed in more than its race for the league championship. It has recalled Walter J. Mueller, outfielder, who retired from baseball three years ago. He is to apply for reinstatement to Commissioner K. M. Landis at the request of the Pittsburgh club.

One seldom finds a league-leading club next to last in the fielding averages as is the case with the Yankees this season. Their percentage is 965, St. Louis being the only club lower. Pittsburgh, second in the National League standing is also seventh in the standing for club fielding having a percentage of .963.

Alt seems hard to believe that Sisler. St. Louis manager, is batting below .300. His efforts to bring the club up from its present poor showing is not helping his individual batting average. Managerial dutles are heavy when the club plays below standard.

Finishing the Hat

Crochet crêpe paper hats may be finished in several different ways, but in every case it is desirable to stiffen them very slightly. Probably the best stiffening treatment is a brushing of liquid paste over the inside of the crown, and allowing it to dry thoroughly before handling.

Hats that are made with the singl crochet stitch are very attractive if they are covered with a colorite preparation the same color as the crêpe paper used. When this is used vill not be necessary to stiffen with paste as the colorite will have the desired stiffening effect. A delicious treat for that "hurry-up" Sunday supper

"HURRY-UP" because the maid's out. Or because you had your elaborate dinner in the middle of the day. Or because it is too hot to eat a big meal.

But it need not be an ordinary Sunday supper just because you don't feel like cooking. Lift it above the level of "just another meal" by serving "Canada Dry." This fine old ginger ale is a pleasant change from the usual routine, and your family and guests will appreciate it.

But be sure you get "Canada Dry." Cheap ginger ales will not bring you the same refreshment.

Nine times out of ten they aren't real ginger ales at all, but are made with capsicum, or plain red pepper. And you don't want that.

Purity is the first essential in every beverage and you get no substitutes in "Canada Dry.

Try this some day soon: Toasted cheese sandwiches and "Canada Dry." It's a real treat.

Special Hostess Package The most convenient way of buying "Canada Dry." Ideal for home use. Twelve bottles in a substantial carton. You will be especially glad to have it handy for your dinners at home or when friends drop in unexpectedly. This Hostess Package is sold by all

H. MOECKLIN, Prop. tion with the teachers' salaries problem in England and Wales. Only two local authorities out of a total of 318 have refused to adopt the Burnham scales, and it now appears as though these two will come into line. The other event is the declaration by high legal authorities that the action recently taken by the Board of Education in making a rule that local authorities must pay the Burnham scales is beyond the power of the Ruling by Board The Burnham Committee, on the other hand, after arbitration by Lord Burnham, declared that each authority should pay one scale only throughout the whole of its area. Then came the publication of a rule by the Board of Education, the effect of which was to compel each authority to adopt its allocated Burnham scale. This seemed to set-tle the question so far as the two outstanding authorities were con-cerned; but the Essex County Councerned; but the Essex County Council have taken the advice of a high legal authority, Mr. Upjohn, K. C. and his opinion is that the rule conflicts with the statutory right of a local governing body to decide what emoluments it shall pay its servants. The Board of Education itself has apparently feedived similar advice, so that the two local authorities felt themselves free to do as they pleased in the matter.

Teachers' Union Acts At this point however, the National

The outcome of the dispute, however, is that a new regulation governing teachers' salaries has been made by the Board of Education. Lord Eustace Percy, Minister of Education, in a written parliamentary answer has stated that he has been divised that the Education Board has power to make a regulation laying down as a condition of grant oward local education service such a scale of salaries for teachers as appears proper and necessary. Despite another increase of $22,000,000 in brokers' loans in the week ended Aug. 18, making a gain of more than $140,000,000 in the last three weeks, operations for the rise were conducted with confidence in the early trading.

Isolated points of weakness among influential shares, especially United States Steel, Montgomery Ward, Woolworth and Canadian Pacific failed to arrest the forward trend of other steels.

Increased purchases of railroads were associated with predictions that July earnings would establish another record. Northern Pacific and Rock Island eclipsed their previous high prices of the year. More varied buying was observed, with the public utilities and food issues showing a revival of speculative interest.

The renewal rate on call loans remained unchanged at 4½ per cent.

Packers Hold Prices Firmly, So Tanners Withdraw

Not a sale was reported in the packer hide market last week, which is a rather unusual occurrence. Offerings were held firmly by the packers, and tanners refused to meet their prices. There were rumors of some confidential sales, but these could not be confirmed.

Among the important listings were July and August pull-offs, light and

July and August pull-offs, light and ex-light Texas steers and branded cows at 13½c. Native steers sold at 15c, heavy Texas and buttbranded steers at 14c; ex-light native steers and light native cows at 14c. Bids varied a fraction to a full cent vides. varied a fraction to a full cent under

This tightening up of the market is a departure from the free selling attitude of the packers that has been the rule for several months. Packers say, however, that they are sold up close to receipts, and that no surplus of hides some buying on slight concessions. Frigoriac prices have strengthened somewhat, liberal buying from Europe accounting for the firmness. New accounting for the firmness. New York demand is light. Packer kip and calfskins are easy. Packer kip and calfskins are easy, July and August calf is listed at 20 and 20½c. There were a few sales of packer kip, mostly Julys, at 15@16½ and 18½c. NEW FINANCING IN FIRST SIX MONTHS SETS HIGH RECORD

. Special from Monitor Bureau NEW YORK, Aug. 24—New financing in the United States for the first six months of 1926 aggregated more than $4,000,000,000, a higher figure than ever before, according to the Index, published by the New York Trust Company.

While government securities declined with the first 4 per cent as compared with the first half of the previous year, corporate securites offered in this country increased 14 per cent over the corresponding period last year, and form 70 per cent of the total figure.

per cent of the total figure.

The greatest expansion was found in the offering of public utilities, the report said. These constitute the largest group, and their new securities during the six-month period aggregated $1,201,000,000 as compared with $961,000,000 in 1925. A decline was noticeable in the securities of companies the line in motors and accessories and dealing in motors and accessories, and railtoad financing diminished by more than $125,000,000. The decline of municipal issues from $752,000,000 in 1925 to $711,000,000 this year, might be taken as an indication that municipalities are exercising more restraint in their borrowings, it said. The market for foreign securities in Great Britain is recovering, and not withstanding the general strike and the depression of British industry, new securities offered in Great Britain during the first six months of the year. ing the first six months of the year excluding British Government loans for national purposes, amounted to $640,000,000, exceeding any half-year figure since the first half of 1922.

STOCKS IN LONDON CONTINUE QUIET

LONDON, Aug. 24—The stock market continued quiet today, with business almost entirely professional. The fact that the present settlement will be a 21-day one seems to have checked public interest in the market. Oils held firm with Royal Dutch and Shelf the leading features. The tractions were well supported, but textiles were in supply. Industrials re-acted from an overbought condition, with iron and steel shares easier on talk of large reconstructions being necessary in that industry.

Home rails were quiet, awaiting further news from the coal industry, and rubber issues were dull. Royal Dutch was quoted at $2%, Rio Tinto 31% and Courtaulds at 5 29-32.
The gilt-edge division continued quiet with investors cautious, owing to the uncertainty of the monetary outlook.

In Colombia lack of rain delayed rlanting this year, and it seems probable that the crop will be smaller than usual, although local cotton mills are of the opinion that the usual planting has taken place.

COTTON GOODS BUYING IS OF LESS VOLUME

Trading Restricted Last Week by Imminence of Government Report

NEW BEDFORD, Mass., Aug. 24 (Special)—The imminence of the Government cotton crop condition report which was published yesterday held the primary cofton goods markets in check during the last week, and buying was of smaller volume than for some time.

Gray goods buyers saw in the crop report a possibility of a further cut in raw cotton values and preferred to wait in the hope that gray goods prices might be lower.

The pressure of immediate needs forced some trading, particularly in bag cloths and in low count goods.

There were attempts to break prices, and firm bids for small quantities were made an eighth or a sixteenth under the current market level. For the most part these attacks were futile, though occasional instances were reported twhere round lot orders were taken at a slight concession.

Prices in most construction remained unchanged at the minimum figures prevailing previously, and many sellers preferred to retire from the market altogether pending some improvement in the demand.

Wash Goods Lines

Wash Goods Lines

The opening of the wash goods lines served as the big center of interest during the week, and this was kept on the quivive throughout the week owing to the fact that the Pacific Mills did not present its offerings until yesterday, but the American Print Works line created a real sensation. It included beyond all doubt the handsomest fabrics this organization has ever put out, goods styled with a genius hitherto achieved only in the best silk goods houses.

The cloths used as a foundation were of the type turned out by the best of the fine goods mills and included silk and cotton mixtures, as well as cotton and rayon fabrics. The finish was of a sort never before attempted by the American Print Company, and the entire line was so widely varied in character as to invade the field hitherto occupied only by the smaller independent converters of fine goods.

What effect this showing will have on the trade organization is a matter for speculation, since it has already caused much hesitation among the in-dependent converters, and may do much to upset this section of the

Fine Goods More Active

Fine Goods More Active

The fine goods division of the gray goods markets showed somewhat more activity than was evident in the coarser constructions, and mill men claimed to see a slight improvement in the price attitude of buyers.

Continued difficulty is experienced in stirring interest in normal volume in woven-in fancies, and the bulk of the trading seems to be for the plainer types of fabric, suitable for printing.

mainer types of fabric, suitable for printing.

While considerable trading in pongees, in fine wolles and combed lawns has been reported, the profit margins on these cloths are so slender that only the most efficiently run plants can show a profit above their overhead on them.

Broadcloths continue to move in good volume, particularly the carded constructions, and on combed 128 x 68s prices improved slightly, with the better Eastern goods selling for 17c whenever Eastern mills could be coaxed into accepting this level.

Shirting manufacturers began this week to figure as buyers, and oxfords, broadcloths, pongees and similar fabrics were taken for deliveries extending through the next six or eight weeks.

Silk and cotton mixtures continue ather slow, owing to the uncertainty with regard to the raw silk outlook, but there has been some trading, consisting mostly of the cleaning up of the cleaning of the cleaning that had been sort or another, and Rayon Alpacas Popular ussahs are similarly affected, there russans are similarly affected, there being less demand now for this sort of fabric than there was a year ago. The popularity of rayon alpacas continues to absorb attention in fine goods lines, and this seems to be one type of bread and butter goods that the fine goods mills can see daylight on.

Fine combed sattens were also sold on some volume, including some really high priced goods. In print cloths and sheetings, prices remained little changed for the last week, and sales were very light indeed.

Fall River reported total sales in the heighborhood of 75,000 pieces, the bulk of which consisted of coarse sateens and twills, and of low count cloths.

Heavy goods moved very slowly during the last week, and colored yarn goods showed a slackening from the more active buying interest evident a few weeks ago.

few weeks ago.

Production, however, continues to gain week by week. The progress in this direction is slower than some had expected, but merchandisers look upon this as a decidedly sound factor in the situation, and predict continued improvement in gray goods markets if production is not increased too rapidly.

PROFITS GROW

PENNSYLVANIA

, Buying of Pennsylvania Railroad shares is based on the improvement in the railroad situation in general and the substantial increase in earnings being shown by the company in particular, as well as to the expectation that stockholders will ultimately share in larger ineasure in the growing income of the company.

For 1925 the Pennsylvania reported net income of $62,220,324, which was equivalent to 12.46 per cent off the stock, the best showing made in any year since capital stock has reached its present proportions of nearly $500,000.

For the first half of 1926 the company reported net railway operating income of $44,567,706 as compared with $538,022,978 in first half of 1925, an increase of $6,544,728. With good earnings practically assured for July and August, and with outlook for good general business in the fall and early winter, there is good prospect that net income will make a new high record for this year, possibly reaching between $70,000,000 and $75,000,000, or between 14 and 15 per cent on the between 14 and 15 per cent on the capital stock

Financial Condition Strong At 55 Pennsylvania on the present 6 per cent or $3 dividend basis yields 5.45 per cent, while if the dividend rate should be raised to 7 per cent, or $3.50 per annum the yield at 55 would be 6.36 per cent.

In addition to the record-breaking gait at which earnings are running, Pennsylvania is in the strongest finan-cial condition in its history with no prospect of any financing this year or next and no large maturities to meet until 1930. until 1930.

The property has been rehabilitated, efficiency restored as shown by a steady decrease in operating ratio, and harmonious relations established and harmonious relations established with the employees through the employees representation plan.

Further evidence of the increasing interest of employees in the welfare and prosperity of the company is shown in the monthly additions to their already substantial holdings of Pennsylvania shares.

Ten-Year Record

The following table covers the high spots of the last 10 years, giving net income, per cent earned on capital stock, and high and low prices for the sheet.

The current price of 55 shows an increase of 22% points over the low mark of 1921, or 70 per cent. Based on the roundly 10,000,000 shares of stock outstanding the increase of $22.75 a share represents an appreciation in aggregate market value of the stock of $227,500,000. MONEY MARKET

Would Your Set Stand Shaking?

HE Radio Laboratory of the Bureau of Standards is engaged continuously in experiments and researches, the results of which are intended to better reception conditions for the approximately 25,000,000 radiocast listeners. These Government tests vary in nature from a study of the mechanical and electrical behavior of a tiny piece of mineral as the governor of the frequency or wavelength of a radiocasting station to the subjection of a receiving set to severe jars and jolts on a vibrating machine in order to determine the ruggedness of the radio receiver and its ability to withstand service afield and in farm homes. In the above picture one of these machines is shown.

National Liberal Federation Seeks Local Option as Step to Prohibition

LONDON - The harmony which characterized the first day's proceed ings of the meeting of the National Women's Liberal Federation was equally present throughout the ses-sions. The firm attitude of peace adopted by the president, Mrs. Wintringham, spread through the as-sembly and it was very evident that the general desire for unanimity would prevent the women of the Liberal Party from foundering upon the rocks which had so lately en-dangered their male colleagues.

The problem of intemperance came first upon the agenda. Speaking to a motion which demanded control by means of local option for England and Wales, no sale or supply of in-toxicating liquor on Sundays, and the supply of intoxicants in clubs becoming subject to the grant of an annual permit or license by the local justices, Lady Fisher Smith said that the £316,000,000 of the drink bill was a sum four times as large as that of the bill for education.

Not Ready for Prohibition She did not consider that to press for prohibition was a practical way of tackling the difficulty, because England had not yet passed through 92,000,000 sary preparation for prohibition. For tra. 10—News; weather.

possible to measure the outlay on education in terms of cash; the reeducation in terms of cash; the result could only be measured in terms of humanity. The present use of 665 school buildings which had been condemned, some as long as 20 years ago, as unfit for use on account of their darkness, their dirt and their damp condition, she said, was not only a disgrace, but a state of affairs so short-sighted as to be almost unbelievable. "How can we hope to conduct a world trade with a people trained in schools such as these? Mrs. Alderton asked, and she went on to deplore the fact that classes so were at present, a very general rule. More than 4000 classes consisted of more than 60 children, and, foreshadowed in the proposals Conservative Government to the Local Education Authorities, was the possibility of still larger classes in A resolution regretting the Government proposals and urging the necessity for reduction in the size of classes, an increase in secondary, central, and technical school places, a replacement of insanitary and defective school buildings and an effective extension of the school medical service was carried unanimously Mrs. Francis Adland moved a reso ution calling upon the Liberal Party to put its entire energy into the cam-paign for the Land Policy which had been approved by the Liberal Land Conference.

This is made possible by the elaborate radiocast arrangements now being perfected for the exposition, preliminary announcement of which has just been made by G. It was planned to have a national program—the first in history, of its kind; a program made up of the favorite artists sent by the largest cities of the United States, by popular vote of the public. It is impossible to carry out this idea this year, but several cities will send representatives, to

DELAWARE SCHOOL ISSUE NOT PRESSED Mr. du Pont Wants Bonding

Ballot to Go Over WILMINGTON, Del. (Special Correspondence) -- Pierre S. du Pout has announced that he will make no forther effort to have the Delaware Legislature pass a bill at the present session for bonding the State to the amount of $9,000,000 for the rebuilding of all the old and unfit schoolhouses. The bill was defeated by two votes in the State Senate two years ago, and it is listed to come up The measure has met with so much oposition from some of the rural districts that it was decided to let the bill lie in abeyance and remove the chief bone of contention before the voters in November. The drys of the State had planned to join with the anti-bonding electors to defeat the measure in retaliation for Mr. du Pont's open advocacy of changes in the enforcement of the prohibition amendment. He presided at a meeting of wets at Milford and advocated regulation of the traffic after the method in vogue in Quebec. Mr. du Pont's action, however, does not bar the measure from the Legislature, and it yet may be introduced and pressed by any member of that body. It is announced that the surplus revenue of the State, which amounts to more than $5,000,000 a year, can be devoted to the rebuilding program that will give within two years one of the most modern and complete educational plants in the United States. Registered at the Christian Science Publishing House

Of but few men of the past several decades in the United States can it be said more truthfully

"America's First Citizen"

than in the case of Dr. Charles W. Eliot, president emeritus of Harvard' University, that he was a representative American citizen. For considerably more than half a century numbered among the country's leading educators, he was a man who was identified with the best and highest in America's college life. He was a man, too, who stood for his ideals in the face of opposition and ridicule, and who lived to see many of his ideas bear practical fruitage in their acceptance throughout the length and breadth of the land. Indeed, one might say justifiably that this influence for good in the line of his chosen endeavor was not limited by any national boundaries, but made itself felt in every land where education was struggling for freer and larger expression.

To the younger generation, Dr. Eliot was, of course, known chiefly as an author, and a speaker of simple force and vigorous conception. His famous "five-foot shelf" of literature has done much to familiarize the great mass of people with authors who otherwise would have never been known to them. And his addresses on public affairs were always so well balanced and showed such wide understanding of their subject matter that what he said was listened to with the utmost respect. His recognition of the value of prohibition and his expressed conviction that there would be no modification of the Volstead Law in the wrong direction showed, moreover, that he had a full realization of the advancing morality of the country and saw from his standpoint of experience that the unfoldment thus far undergone could only proceed to its completion. But it was in his extraordinary executive power as the president of Harvard University that Dr. Eliot gained that reputation for vision and ability that has become synonymous with his name. The ideals of a university that he held were primarily that it should teach, and then that it should serve as a reliable storehouse of knowledge by its libraries and museums and provide opportunities for original research. And the strength of his grasp upon fundamentals was explained by the fact that he always emphasized as essential subjects to be taught, "virtue, duty, plety and righteousness." Characterized by Dr. Oliver Wendell Holmes as a "turner of flapjacks" because of the enthusiastic manner in which he threw himself into the task of expanding the educational sphere of Harvard, he left the enduring memorial in that university of having increased the faculty from about seventy-five to some 500 and the student body from about 1000 to five times that number. was an earnest advocate of individualism in education and went on record as believing that "selection of studies for the individual, instruction addressed to the individual, irregular promotion, grading by natural capacity and rapidity of attainment" represented the educational

It is not given to everyone to engrave his or her name upon the tablets of time, nor has every reformer lived to see his ideals in definite realization. Dr. Eliot was successful in both of these achievements. Universally honored, he will long be remembered not alone for what he did but also for what he was.

The premiers or other responsible ministers representative of the British dominions overseas-those lusty sons of a stalwart mother, who have taken unto themselves the sobriquet of the British Commonwealth of Nations-will forgather in Downing Street next October to deliberate on and seek solutions to many weighty problems. From the far Pacific they will sail, and representatives from India will be in attendance. In place of General Smuts, who was present at the last conference, will be another Boer general (according to present arrangements) from South Africa, General Hertzog, the Prime Minister. From the northern clime of Canada it is uncertain who will emerge as the spokesman. This great Dominion will shortly be in the throes of a general election, and political prophets are seemingly not overanxious to foretell who will emerge from the struggle with the laurel crown

Matters of the utmost importance will be discussed by these premiers from overseas and their English colleagues-important not only to the Empire, but to the world at large. The dignity of these statesmen has been considerably enhanced since the holding of the first conference in 1887 at the time of Queen Victoria's first jubilee. Then they sat round the council table, rather on the edge of their chairs, but now they sit well back with alf the assurance of equals. Then they represented colonies, now dominions, admittedly nation-members of a great Commonwealth Now, too, they have an equal say in the imperial problems to be solved, problems affecting their particular part of the obe, if not the Empire as a whole. And they have the right, gladly recognized by the mother country, to decide their own fate, to guide their

The Locarno pact, which they are privileged to sign as individual nations; the question of the sea defenses of the British Empire, and what contributions, if any, are to be made by the dominions; the course to be pursued by the eas possessions in the event of Great Britain ever again being involved in another war; the treaty-making powers of the domin-ions—these and other kindred subjects, as well as economic issues of an imperial nature, will be duly threshed out. When the subject of the navy is under dis-ussion, doubtless Admiral Jellicoe's scheme for empire naval co-operation will be examined. The Admiral's plan broadly is one of dominion contribution, but, as responsible British ministers have pointed out, this is entirely a matter for the dominions, and it is common knowledge that there is considerable divergence of opinion on the matter. What the British Government desires above all things is to avoid any appearance of interference with the dominions while at the same time endeavoring to frame a common policy for the safety of the Empire. "The partner governments of the Empire," to quote a happy phrase of L. C. M. S. Amery, Minister for the Colonies, in a recent House of Commons debate, are as independent as England herself, "only qualified," to further quote Mr. Amery, "by the self-imposed responsibility of mutual loyalty, helpfulness and co-operation in all matters to make for the welfare of the Empire as a whole."

The many and weighty problems before India, an empire in itself, have not been overlooked, and it is safe to say that these will occupy the attention of visiting statesmen for

William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, in an article contributed

Efficiency of Labor in America to the Forum, asserts that a general strike could form no part of the program of labor statesmanship in the United States in that the conditions which brought about the big strike in England would be impossible of duplication on the American side of the Atlantic. Mr. Green went further to explain that the labor movement in the United States is based upon democratic ideals, and that there are no "classes" in that country as is the case in Europe, persons in one group being constantly on the move to the other. In other words, a laborer of today becomes the capitalist of tomorrow. This conception of the industrial partnership is probably at the root of the tremendous accomplishments that have been attained in the United States. Labor is willing to produce more in the United States and to obtain greater pay for the time spent in so doing. By such means both the employer and the employee profit.

In a recent monograph published by the National Foreign Trade Council, the results of an investigation into the productivity of American labor were given. It was claimed that soft coal production in the United States is eighty hundredweight per man-shift, against seventeen and one-half hundredweight production in Great Britain. And an American miner received $40 per week when continuously employed, as against $13 a week earned by the British miner. The investigation showed that the average production per man engaged in twenty-two basic industries in the United States was 34 per cent more than in 1920. This gives some idea of the extent to which laborious tasks have been mechanized. If there has been any pride felt in America in the system of quantity production prior to this date, there is even still more reason to feel grateful for the accomplishments of the past five to ten years.

This saving in man-power has not been exclusive to the strictly manufacturing operations, but it has been in evidence in house. building, farming, road building and every enterprise upon which improved methods of management or power utilization could be applied The National Industrial Conference Board estimates that the volume of production in 1923 was 33 per cent greater per wage earner than it was in 1914, and it required 25 per cent less labor, 13 per cent less power, 17 per cent less management personnel per unit of production, man than in 1914. The general improvement throughout the whole country is very apparent from these studies. While there has been a great saving in man-power, there has been an increase in production, which in turn has resulted in a larger unit return to labor.

Mr. Green, therefore, is perfectly correct in claiming that the American laborer is much more than a mere machine. He is a thinking individual who is deeply concerned with the economic development of his country and the growing wealth of his industry. The union, according to Mr. Green, is co-operating in finding better ways of doing the day's work, in discovering ways to prevent waste of materials and careless handling of machinery, abuse of tools, waste of power, and the economical use of all factors that enter into production. .Adhering to such a fundamental, it is not likely that conditions could arise in America which would make a "general strike" possible.

The approaching elections for senators and representatives in the United States Congress

will doubtless be credited with the renewed activity in political circles over methods for improving conditions in agriculture. Farmers have votes, and 'it appears highly desirable that they should be persuaded that this, that or the other candidate will aid in bringing about better returns to the workers on the land. In a year without national elections the subject of federal assistance to agriculture is dropped when the Congress adjourns, and the complaints of the dirt farmers are ignored as a topic for popular dis-

Recent developments in the middle western states, where the primaries have evidenced the growth of a strong sentiment, independent of party lines, favorable to aggressive action looking to remove some of the farmers' disabilities, indicate that the discontent with existing farm conditions will be an important factor in deciding the results at the coming elections. While the prevailing attitude of the farmers inclines toward legislation along the lines of the McNary-Haugen bill, for stabilizing prices of staple farm crops, there is grave doubt whether any measure of the kind can be enacted, even though the farm bloc succeeds in securing a larger representation in the Senate and House. As an alternative proposition there has now been put forward by the Administration a plan for financing co-operative farm associations with $100,000,000 of private funds, to be expended under federal supervision.

To some extent the proposed fund would supplement the work of the Intermediate Credit banks, created by an Act of Congress in 1923, which have advanced loans amounting to about $250,000,000; of which about $70,000,000, is still outstanding. These banks are now lending money to farm co-operatives at 41/2 per cent interest, certainly a low rate as compared with the returns on capital invested in industry and trade. It can hardly be expected that the new credit system could make loans at a lower rate, or that private finance would be willing to accept even that rate for so large an amount as $100,000,000. If this fund is intended to be used to finance new co-operatives it probably will meet with active opposition in many farming regions, where private enterprise is conducting successful marketing concerns, which will object to competition by government-aided powers and for great reserves of resources untapped. Canada is just being discovered by the motor tourist. Globetrotters and discerning travelers have long known of Canada's wonderful scenery. But it required the building of highways to open up hidden treasures of beauty which are every year attracting more visitors from the United States, from Europe and elsewhere abroad, as well as delighting citizens at home who are seeing for the first time some of the glories of

From Yarmouth and Bras d'Or at the eastern extremes to Victoria and Prince Rupert on the Pacific coast, 4000 miles across Canada, a marvelous variety of natural beauty and grandeur is being disclosed along the highways. Train travelers have enjoyed the trips along the shores of the Maritime Provinces, and up through the Matapedia Valley into central Canada. Passenger liners take tourists down the St. Lawrence River to the Saguenay country, and up through the Thousand Islands to Niagara and the Great Lakes. Lake of the Woods, Lake Winnipeg, and the unexplored northern lakes of Saskatchewan and Alberta are coming more within the orbit of American tourist traffic. It is in the Rocky Mountains, however, that Canada's supreme bid for fame is made as the land of magnificent scenery, and the response of the traveling public must surely be gratifying to the Dominion.

On the highway from Calgary to Banff and Lake Louise, the procession of touring automobiles begins early in June and continues through the summer months well on into the colorful days of autumn. Transcontinental trains from Vancouver and from the east bring in streams of tourists, eager to explore further into the heart of the mountains. It is an impressive trip through the Rockies by train, down the Kicking Horse Pass or over the more northerly Yellowhead Pass Froute. But it is after leaving the train at Jasper, or at Banff and over the Great Divide, that the rarest gems of Canadian mountain scenery are discovered. Trails that were once known only to the Indians are today traversed by the ubiquitous automobile. Where the motorcar cannot penetrate, saddle horse and guides are ready to push on into mountain fastnesses; and there are still the lofty peaks, which yield only to the most intrepid of wayfarers, to be climbed.

. Vancouver and Calgary have been linked up by a highway through the mountains, along the path of the old Caribon Trail, which may some day be popularly regarded as one of the great adventures of automobile driving in America. Motor trips are being made from Glacier National Park in Montana to the Rocky Mountains Park in Alberta, and other highways from south of the border penetrate into the Canadian Rockies. The crowning plan is to build north from Lake Louise to Jasper Park, along the line of the Great Divide, where some of the most majestic peaks of the Rockies have still to be explored. Canada has discovered that highway building through beautiful country is a sound investment, whose full value, moreover, is to be measured in something more than economic value.

Editorial Notes

The Lawrence (Kan.) Daily Journal-World recently published an editorial entitled "Gasoline vs. Hooch." It was based upon the fact that at the time of publication thousands of persons were attending the revival of horse racing at Smithville, about twenty miles from Kansas City, and that a number of them had been struck by the evidence of prohibition law enforcement as shown in the Smithville crowds. Several Lawrence men, it appears, called attention to the fact that liquor was conspicuous by its absence. And here is the further comment in the editorial upon the situation:

One of the reasons ascribed is that most of the people there have driven twenty miles or so to reach the races. And most of them know that the use of liquor would lessen the chances of their reaching or leaving the scene of the races without accident. It has been said that in its beginning prohibition was an economic matter. The coming of the automobile age has only served to clinch the economic argument. With liquor as freely used as it was thirty years ago, such traffic as is now seen on the highways could not be maintained for a single day

Really it would seem that more anniversaries have come to fruitage in 1926 than in the average year, and one of the last to be celebrated is the centennial of Ottawa's founding. One hundred years ago this month Ottawa entered upon its career as an organized community, and in that century it has grown from a mere settlement, far from other communities of any size, into the fifth city of the Dominton, the seat of Federal Government in Canada, and a city that bears comparison with any of the capitals of the world. In her "journey to a higher destiny among the nations-which will surely come if Canadians realize their obligations and render just service to the cause of civilization and progress-Ottawa will and must play an increasingly important part," writes the Citizen in its centen-nial number. "The years ahead stretch forward to a golden future. The capital will take its rank among the greatest in the world. What city could be better blessed."

Open Barrels

THE other day, I was wandering through one of those modern labyrinths known as a "cash and carry" store, where circuitous aisles and numerous gates remind one of the old-time puzzle called "The Walls of Troy." Junior was at my side, tugging manfully at a huge market basket while I selected sundry cans of peas and pineapple, apricots and asparagus. It was an exhilarating process, for, with each selection, I could feel the glow of achievement which attends real "thrift." Suddenly, Junior set the basket down with a thud and began to pull vigorously at my skirt. "Mother," he said in an awed whisper, "that child took a big, red apple from the fruit stand!" "Never mind," I answered, more concerned over the possible breakage of our "profit"—a lovely, amber-shaded jar of orange marmalade, "the child's mother will pay for the apple as she leaves the store.'

But the mother made only a feeble protest, "Put that apple back this instant, do you hear?" and gave the cashier a dime for a loaf of bread. "Mother," asked Junior when we had reached the street, "didn't the lady know it was wrong?"

There was the question. I watched the dear, chubby youngster waddling happily in his mother's wake, munching the stolen fruit. Certainly one must look beyond his dimpled, baby hand to find the aggressor. How alluring must have been that heap of shining apples! And he had wanted one, I am sure, as I had wanted those four English walnuts in a dingy little grocery store many years ago. 4 .4

I can still see that old "grocery" where I learned my first lessons in trade, in human nature, and in-honesty Little object lessons which fitted practically-or not, as the case may have been-into what one had learned at Sabbath school.

I was such a diminutive shopper, to be sure, more weighted even by my mature responsibility than by the big covered market basket in which I carried my purchases. For, at seven, I was already the proud custodian of the post office key and the conscientious bearer of the grocery and butcher books. I remember that I was of the optimistic opinion that so long as there was a blank page left in these little account books, we could go right on "charging" whether the "pension" came or not.

The arrival of the "pension" was a matter of grave import. For after the application had been witnessed and sent to Washington, the whole affair was in my hands. It was I who watched eagerly through the tiny window of the post office box for the official-looking envelope. I who waited, with poor patience, I am sure, while the shaggy-browed postmaster looked with an almost indescribably intent gaze at the envelope and then long and somewhat suspiciously over his spectacles at me.

As though he could not have told at a glance that was a reliable person! It was I who flew home on winged feet with the precious envelope clasped tightly in my hand. I knew what that wonderful paper could do! It could bring a smile to my grandmother's lips and a new sparkle to her eyes. (I had wakened once in the night to hear her praying that the coal might hold out until the pension came.) With the pension money, we could once more, like Longfellow's village blacksmith, "look the whole world in the face, for we owed not any men."

The crowning ecstasy came when the grocery bill had been paid and duly receipted and the grocer began to move smilingly toward the candy counter. "Well, well, he would say, "I suppose all little girls like peppermint lozenges." Yes, little girls did like peppermints. But not nearly so much as they liked cinnamon drops or lemon stick or those fascinating ropes of licorice; and oh, not one-hundredth part as much as they liked "chocolates!"

Peppermints were what old Mr. Revell sometimes gave me out of the pockets of his shiny broadcloth coat when I went with grandmother to his shabby, topsy-turvy law office to get her pension papers witnessed. I imagined that they smelt like the office—a bit musty, or inky. But the grocery treat was always well aired and generously assorted.

The butcher shop was not so alluring as the "grocery."
The butcher was a "woman"—a "big" woman, with a gruff voice and a long, shining knife. Try as I might, I could not help fearing her. I had worked out a little thought to repeat before I went into the shop: "She is a good, kind woman-she has little children of her ownshe wouldn't hurt a hair of your head!" Over and over.

But when I had entered the dark, austere place with its sawdust floor and its rows of freshly quartered meat and had heard those deep tones rumble forth, "Well, well, what's for you?" I could barely control my voice while I replied, "If you please ma'am, just a soup bone." If it chanced to be pay day, however, the atmosphere seemed a degree warmer and the butcher woman would say, "How's your grandmother, child?" and wrap us up a few "pigs' feet" or a portion of "head cheese" as an especial delicacy.

The grocery store was always fascinating. In summer, it was dim and cool after the hot, dusty street, and its piles of fruit and melons made it colorful despite its rough walls and cluttered counters. In winter, it was a veritable haven of warmth, and its great, homely, openfaced stove cast a mellow glow over the faces of the old men who sat about to talk and whittle. Primly I must have come upon this informal scene with my big basket, my grocery book and my marketing list.

The list had been insisted upon after I had trusted a too capricious memory. "Butter, sugar and candles, grandmother had said, "can you remember?" "B— S— "I had answered. I can remember that by "butterscotch candy." So "butter-scotch candy" I had said, over and over, all the way to the store. And then, I had forgotten my code and had guessed, happily enough so far as concerned my own tastes, at "bananas, salmon, and caraway seed."

The matter of the open barrels had always been a problem. The tasting of butter on a splint of wood I could understand-one was buying butter; likewise, the sampling of cheese. But did I not see the old men go at intervals to the open barrels and return to their chairs, munching? Dried peaches, apples, even cranberries. Was ? The goods belonged to the grocer. Was it Why, the old men were, oftentimes, the very wrong? old men who came to the church and who passed the long-handled collection boxes which so resembled "corn poppers." For a long time, I pondered the matter. And then, one day, I stood beside a barrel of English walnuts. I looked down upon them. They looked up at me, temptingly. I reached forth my hand. Oh, if they had only been plain, everyday walnuts! They would then have had no power. But "English" walnuts! them only at Christmas time when you brought them home from the Christmas tree in a red mosquito-bar bag which bulged all over with candy and nuts, and a veritable sunburst of orange on one side. You ate them sparinglysometimes at intervals of a whole day-and finally, you gilded the shells and placed them on the "whatnot "English" walnuts!

There were still three of the walnuts when I reached home. I had stopped by the roadside and eaten one. It had not tasted so sweet as those we got at Christmas. It had been, indeed, a trifle bitter. I was troubled, for the conflict was still raging within me and all the thinking about the "old men" that I might do did not silence it.

I was determined, however, not to add a lie to my transgression. I laid the three walnuts on the table beside the market basket. Grandmother's kind eyes rested on them for a moment and then, severely and uncompromisingly, upon me. I tried to speak: "Oh, grandmother, the old men take things out of barrels—" I could only throw myself, weeping, into grandmother's ready arms.

By the time my tears were dried I knew what I must do. No law of Medes and Persians could have been more adamant. Slowly, falteringly, I retraced my steps to the store, bearing the three walnuts. Like a criminal before a court of justice, I stood inside the door, waiting for the grocer to accost me. It would be only a matter of a moment, grandmother had said, a moment-and the courage to do right. I need only say, "Please, sir, I was tempted by the walnuts-and took four. One, I have eaten-you may charge that to my grandmother

Oh, gentle, kindly grocer man—you, whose name I have long forgotten—how tenderly you smoothed that moment of childish agony; how forgivingly your hand rested upon my head; how lovingly you turned that hour of ignominy into victory!

Four English walnuts. Trifles, surely. Yet of sufficient weight to carry a message down through the years. Never again did I doubt the inner voice, no matter how many old men may have dipped in other folks' barrels. But more than that. Never have I forgotten that to baby

The World's Great Capitals: The Week in Paris

DOUARD HERRIOT, Minister of Public Instruction is anxious that school teachers should show children how economy can be practiced. There has been an undoubted change in French habits of thrift, and an endeavor should be made to restore those habits which have characterized the French. In his circular M. Herriot says that fruit and vegetables should be pared as little as possible and that ashes should be earefully sifted to recover cinders. He exhorts the younger generation not to waste bread. Fresh milk should be preferred to the tinned milks imported from abroad. Less gas should be burned. Electric light should be turned off when it is not required. Care should be taken of clothes, and nobody should be apprehensive of being thought shabby. There are a number of other suggestions which he makes, and one may or may not agree with the specific recommendations. But on the general purpose of inculcating thrift in children there can hardly be two opinions. Sacrifices of the kind he proposes are not, he urges, insignificant; and France should go back to its old traditions of economy.

Now that there is more talk of taxing foreigners, an article by Stéphanne Lauzanne is worth noting. Tax foreigners if you please, he tells the legislators, but do not annoy them. It would be possible, after the example of the United States, to collect the head tax without any trouble or complications. Therefore, instead of demanding a multitude of papers and signatures, instead of requircountless démarches, there should be a system by which a tax should be paid quite simply by foreign travelers on steamers or trains. Few people would object to this course provided they were given a receipt which would serve as a permis de séjour. Anyone who has experienced the endless French formalities will be heartily in accord with this view. One would willingly pay any reasonable sum rather than obtain a certificate from hotel-keeper or concierge, have it stamped by the local police, visit the préfecture and give a thousand particulars, be obliged to return again and again and wait in unpleasant corridors in long queues. If one could pay and be done with it, there would be little objection. Afterward one should be allowed to travel freely and not be bothered further.

An interesting pamphlet in English has been issued by the International Institute of Intellectual Co-operation. It is stated that the institute, which has its headquarters in the Palais-Royal in Paris and is an offshoot of the League of Nations, has now been at work for several months. The period is not long enough for any striking performance, but it is long enough for a survey of its possibilities. The institute is setting on foot an international organization of bibliography, with an exchange of information in the domain of physical science, and an interchange of publications. It seeks the unification of nomenclature. It would have professors and students visit the various countries ld protect works of art and look after the rights of artists. It would encourage co-operation among museums. It would foster international exhibitions. It would bring out the international aspect of the motion picture. Ge ally it would co-ordinate and stimulate, and would act as a central clearing house of ideas and projects. The pamphlet makes capital reading for those who are interested in better international relations.

In the primary schools of France the following subject was proposed to the young pupils in the drawing classes: "Symbolize by a drawing, simple but showing action, the restoration of our national currency." Thus is fiscal patriotism taught! The compositions showed in some cases a remarkably keen sense of affairs and draftsmanship. Some of them revealed a comic vein which should make of the school children successful cartoonists. One of them represented the Gallic cock drawing a car whose wheelswhich were francs-crushed the pound sterling. Another showed the pound puffed up like the frog of the fable. Another was a balloon, too inflated, bursting in midair. Then there was the franc-David conquering the pound-Goliath. Certainly the children are not lacking in confidence. Perhaps it is unfortunate, however, that they should be encouraged to persist in the foolish legend that it is the pound-or the dollar-which is too big, instead of being informed that it is the franc which is too small. However that may be, the children have plenty of imagination, and there is much to be said for giving them topical subjects of national importance.

An ambulatory apartment is traveling through Normandy, making a short stay in each town. This house on wheels resembles a tank. Its inventor and proprietor, M. Louvet, built it in a year. An original cottage it is, consisting of nine rooms in a line. There is the machine room, where the driver sits, followed by a bedroom, a cabinet de toilette, a salon, a kitchen; and so forth. The rooms are prettily furnished and decorated. They are aired by a series of little portholes with light shades. On the roof is a wireless receiving station. M. Louvet lives in this home with his wife and child. He declares that he leads a most comfortable existence. He can move at the rate of 45 kilometers an hour and see the countryside without paying rent or dining in the restaurants on his route:

Letters to the Editor

Dr. Cadman and the Lausanne Treaty

To the Editor of The Christian Science Montron:
The New York Times recently reported that Bishop Charles H. Brent of the Episcopal diocese of western New York and Dr. S. Parkes Cadman, president of the Federal Council of Churches, who formerly opposed the ratification of the Lausanne Treaty, have now changed their attitude.

I have not been able to communicate with Bis Brent, as he is still sojourning in Europe; but Dr. Cadman, in reply to my inquiries, writes: "I have not changed my views on the Lausanne Treaty."
